What do you hang on your walls? It's a difficult question for every interior. Also, in this case, think big! One frame on your wall won't finish it. Therefore, make a wall of frames. Hang different frames together. First, think of a good lay-out. If you use different frames, make sure you keep the distance between the frames in mind. If one frame is bigger, give this one the space it needs. This way, you keep it fun and playful!

I am upset. At this moment, as I sit here typing this up, I am truly upset. Something happened a little while ago. I got into an argument and I am now reaping the results of that. It's a true bounty of results, I can tell you. Let's see...anger, frustration, shame, disgust...then more anger and guilt at the fact that I have allowed myself to get angry and frustrated. All of this is confusing. It's a form of madness (no offence intended). I think what's worse is that it is quite normal for most people.

Do you like small accessories, but you are afraid that it will make your room look messy? If yes, it's best to group. You can apply it everywhere. Place small groups on your dining table, side table, tv cabinet or in a closet. Don't place small accessories separately everywhere, but put a candleholder, vase and small plant together as a group. This brings calm to your interior. This way, you can combine different styles and create unity.

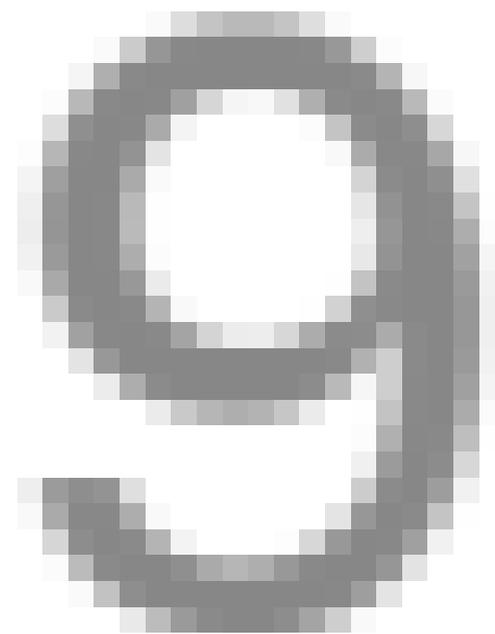

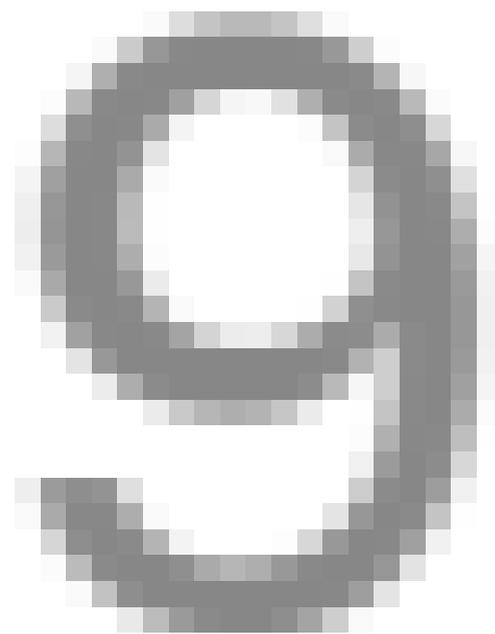

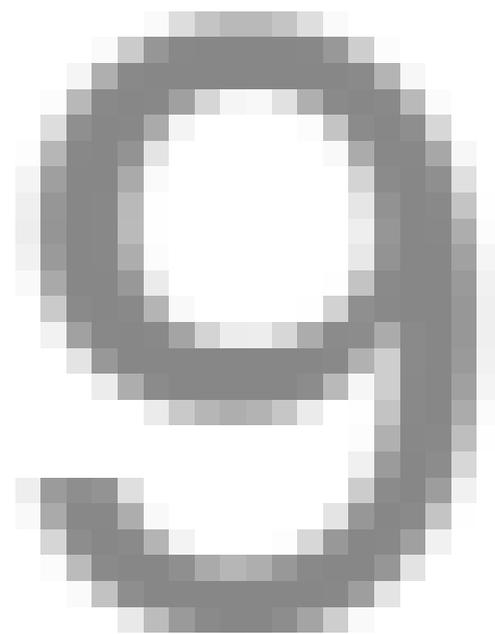

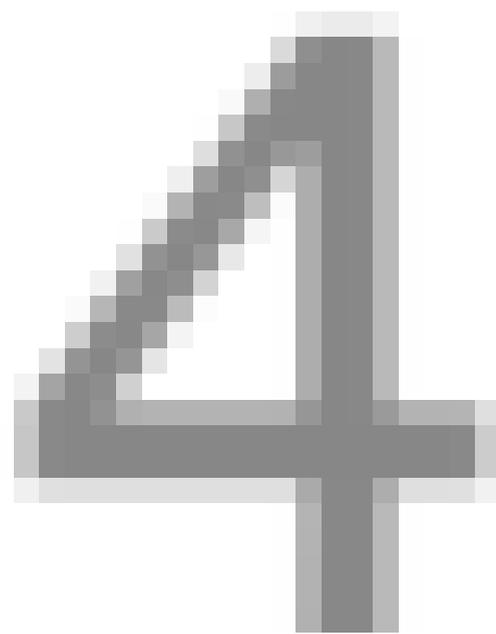

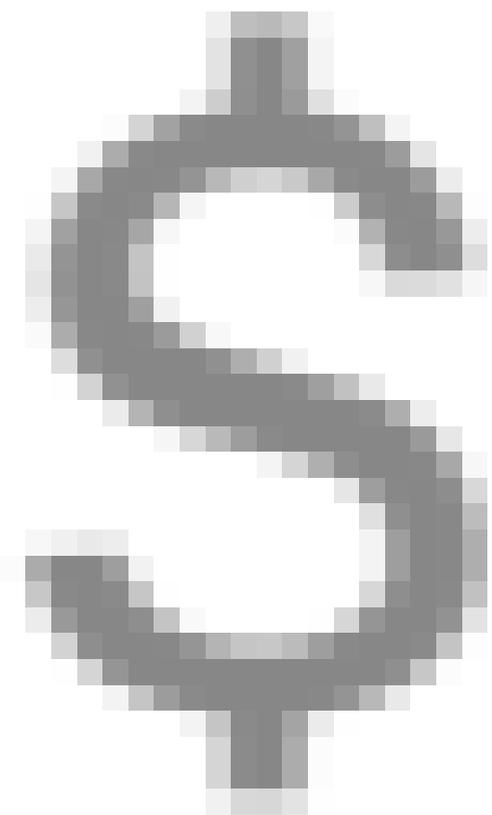

What do you hang on your walls? It's a difficult question for every interior. Also, in this case, think big! One frame on your wall won't finish it. Therefore, make a wall of frames. Hang different frames together. First, think of a good lay-out. If you use different frames, make sure you keep the distance between the frames in mind. If one frame is bigger, give this one the space it needs. This way, you keep it fun and playful!
