I'm not really sure how old I was when I got the gift for Christmas, but I remember thinking it was a pretty impressive piece of electronic hardware. It was really cool looking (technologically speaking), and I was awfully proud to own it. It certainly made for lots of fun times.

What was this high-tech gift, you ask? Why, it was a tape recorder! It was a monographic, reel to reel tape deck that came with its own plug-in microphone. I could hold that mic up to my transistor radio's speaker and record songs onto tape. I could also play the guitar and sing and record every second of it. I could even hide and record conversations from unsuspecting family members. I was in recording heaven!

Years later I owned an 8 track stereo recording deck (ok, that was a mistake). At another point in time I had a stereo cassette recording deck that would physically flip the tape over when one side was finished recording or playing. Now I own a more conventional stereo dual cassette deck, but I no longer use it for recording or much of anything else for that matter.

All my recording is now done on my computer. The audio and midi software available today for computer recording is quite amazing. You can record multiple tracks, edit the recordings and add special effects as desired. Many of the audio recording programs come with their own native special effects such as reverb, compression, flanger, and chorus, to name a few. Some of the recording software can also accept third party effects such as vocal removers, tube amp effects and many more.

Multitrack recording software allows for recording various live instruments, vocals, etc, onto individual tracks. After recording one track, you can play it back while recording another. Once finished, you can mix all the individual tracks down into one stereo track. Some recording software will import and record both audio and MIDI, some audio only. If you have a MIDI keyboard or other MIDI instrument, be sure to pick software that handles both formats.

Creating a simple home audio recording studio is easy. In addition to software, an audio and/or midi interface will allow you to plug all kinds of audio components, microphones and instruments into your computer for live recording, recording from tape or even from your old vinyl lp's. You can also use a home stereo system as an interface for audio components by running cables to it from your computer's sound card. A laptop with recording software and a USB interface can serve as a totally portable recording studio. And again, if you have MIDI instruments, be sure to get an interface that will allow connecting them in addition to audio components and instruments.

The digital revolution has made music recording easily available to anyone with a computer. If you enjoy music and want to do more than just download mp3's from the Internet, get some multitrack recording software and start your own home sound studio.

Eczema can be a burden. It is a skin condition that can range in severity from dry, red patches on your skin to cracked, weeping sores. Eczema is caused by many factors such as genetics and allergic reactions. No matter the cause of your eczema it is important to find eczema relief. Eczema relief can come in many forms such as home remedies to medications from your doctor. Let's first take a look at eczema relief through home remedies. Start by examining your bathing rituals. If you suffer from eczema you should avoid taking baths daily with typical soaps and cleansers. These soaps can be irritating to your skin and have harsh effects. It is important to bathe with hypoallergenic soap products that are color and fragrant free. It is vital to find cleansers that will moisturize and hydrate your skin. Provide further home eczema relief by using strong moisturizers such as Eucerin lotion. This will help to seal in moisture which diminishes redness and helps against itching. You can stock up on Eucerin at your local pharmacy or grocery store. Another area that affects eczema relief is your clothing. Take a look at the materials in the clothing you wear. You can develop contact dermatitis to certain fabrics as well as the detergent these fabrics were washed in. Your eczema may flare up when exposed to wool or even nickel in costume jewelry. Find a detergent that is dye and fragrance free. These types of detergents will help your eczema relief to a great extent. This is a home remedy that you have great control over when you purchase clothing and detergent. Another home remedy for eczema relief comes in the form of changing your diet. Many have found eczema relief through a dairy free and/or wheat free diets. Dairy and wheat are common causes of food allergies. These food allergies surface through skin conditions such as eczema. Eczema relief can begin by substituting soy or lactase free milk for cow milk. If you have tried home remedies and they don't provide eczema relief then see your family doctor or dermatologist. They can determine the intensity of your eczema and prescribe steroids and creams for eczema relief. The important thing to know is that you are not alone and there are many forms of eczema relief at your disposal.
